Bill:
I forgot to mention that the Charrette was advertised and was open to the public and we had quite a turnout of individuals who wanted to be there. While they were not participants at the tables they were free to walk around and interact with the participants and afterwards I had conversations with some of these attendees who thought that the open Charrette process resulted in some very good land use options to move forward with.

John,

One of the neighbors is suggesting that the task force recommendation for density based on the charette is not representative of the community's vision for Seven Corners because the public was not allowed to participate/comment in the charette meeting.

Is this correct and if so who participated in the charette?
